Cruising publisher re-invents its Web Site, launches Forum

Dear Friends of the Waterways,

After weeks of fiddling and fine-tuning, the boaters at Waterway Guide are pleased to announce a Web Site to serve the community of boaters and businesspeople who love America's waterways as much as we do.

www.waterwayguide.com

When you visit the site, you will notice that we continue to showcase up-to-date fuel prices, as submitted by our cruising friends, as well as navigational updates and news broken down by region. We also offer some darn good information in our Cruising Resources section, all free, and continually expanding.

We have collected, and will continue to collect, the best selection of waterfront webcam links anywhere, a feature which is useful and fun. You can also to read the latest copy of Waterway Guide Magazine, in its entirety with new and novel turn-the-page formatting.

We are particularly eager to draw your attention to our new Forum on the site. Registering is free, easy and privacy protected. You may then post your observations or comment on the observations of others. A number of boating forums are good, some are excellent, but none has our singular focus on the people, places and issues of the Intracoastal Waterway, the Great Loop and coastal waters from Eastport, Maine, to Brownville, Texas.

We intend this forum not only as a means of boater-to-boater communication, but a way of bringing our views to the attention of policymakers and government administrators.

As a business strategy, Waterway Guide Publisher Jack Dozier believes that a vibrant Web site will further cement Waterway Guide as "The Cruising Authority," while establishing ourselves as the electronic hub of the 21st century cruising community.

We'll let you know as important news breaks our Waterway Guide Update e-Newsletter. Meanwhile let us know what you think. You've got the Forum to do it.
